

Dear Ajit Pai and the rest of the Federal Trade Commission,

Please do not repeal net neutrality, as it erodes free speech and the fast progress of technology and innovation that we have all benefitted from today. Repeal of net neutrality would only benefit Internet Service Providers and harm the people, small businesses, activists, and public organizations with all the discrimination, censoring, and preferential treatment to the wealthy that it would bring. Just like all people, as a foundation should be treated equally and respect, so should websites.

A college student from Rice University studying Computer Science,
Stephanie Yang